PART 1

THE SKYROCKETING COSTS OF CHRONIC CONDITIONS

As healthcare costs continue to rise, getting to the root of increasing spend is key for employers. For many companies, chronic conditions are a huge driver of their sky-high medical spend.

Chronic Conditions are Causing Health Plan Spend to Soar

HealthCheck360's analysis of multiple clients across a wide range of industries shows that 59% of adult members who incur medical claims had at least one chronic condition like diabetes or hypertension. These people accounted for 80% of the company's medical spend. In addition, individuals with a chronic condition cost their company 2.2x more each year than individuals without a chronic condition.

While America's health care crisis is a complex problem, there are actions you can take to reduce costs, while still supporting and advocating for employee health.
